Self – Description

The final part of the psychological tests is the self-description. This test assists the psychologist in assigning trainability marks to the candidate. Whatever we have found out about your personality in the TAT, WAT and SRT has to be confirmed by the SD. Let's see how to make the SD more understandable.

Brief instructions for writing your SD:

1. In this test there are five topics and you have to write one paragraph for each of them.

a. What do your parents / guardian think about you?
b. What do your teachers / employers think about you?
c. What do your friends / colleagues think about you?
d. What kind of a person you are?
e. What kind of a person you would like to be?

2. In each paragraph you need to include details about your various positive and negative qualities (strengths and weaknesses).
3. You will get 15 minutes to complete the test.

How to make the SD better:

1. People's opinion of you is based on the kind of interaction you have with them. So avoid writing similar kinds of opinion in every paragraph.
2. Ask yourself the question before answering it. What expectations do your parents, teachers / employers, friends / colleagues, have of you?
3. Parents' expectations are seldom materialistic. They want their children to get settled and always do good things in life. They are more concerned about your moral values and keeping the family name high in society.
4. Teachers / employers expect you to be professionally competent, have good subject knowledge, work well in a team, and be sincere and honest. They are concerned about your future plans for development of the organization (self-development, in the case of teachers).
5. The friends and colleagues that you normally spend most of your time with expect you to be trustworthy and sincere, to help them during a crisis, to give suggestions when they are in a dilemma, and to be caring.
6. In your personal opinion, you have to bring out your various strengths and weaknesses. Remember, the purpose of the test is to see how much you know about yourself and not to find out what your weaknesses are. So be careful, and DO NOT describe any negative qualities which can be held against you.
7. In the last paragraph, write the changes you want to incorporate into your personality, and do not write that you want to be a defence officer.

Personal Information Questionnaire

The PIQ is the main tool that an Interviewing Officer uses to assess you, but a co of it goes to the psychologist as well. This is because the psychologist does not s the candidate before the conference, and if he wants to get an insight into t candidate's personality, it is the PIQ which is going to help him.

For the psychologist, The PIQ is not a primary tool of assessment, but it does p some valuable insight during the awarding of train ability marks. The value of w you write in your PIQ is therefore based mainly on the kind of performance show in psychological tests.

Always remember that no psychologist will reference your PIQ to each and e story you write to see whether what you are writing is factual. At the beginnin the book, I mentioned that the psychological tests are based on IMAGINATION you need to show it by writing stories on incidents which you may or may not h actually experienced in your life. If everything you write has to come from di experience, then there would be no role for imagination.

On the other hand, if a person does something wrong, then his PIQ is immedia reviewed to check whether or not his negative qualities have come from experience.

Trainability

After the initial assessment, the psychologists will award train ability marks to each candidate. The trainability marks will indicate how much a candidate can benefit from training in the academy.

Trainability marks are decided based on the following:

1. Type of entry – Your entry type is decided based on two crucial elements. They are age and duration of training.

   a. Age – As we know that the assessment is based on personality, and a person's personality cannot be changed after a certain age, this factor plays a crucial role. Candidates going for the NDA / TES should be between the ages of 17 to 19 as they are generally more trainable compared to other age categories. For graduate entries, the age range is between 20 – 27 it is difficult to bring the desirable changes in personality.

   b. Duration of training – Another advantage with NDA / TES cadets are that they have 4 to 5 years of training compared to graduates who have a maximum of 1 year of training (1 ½ years in terms of the CDS). No drastic changes can made to the personality in such a short period. For service entries such as ACC, SD, CW, SCO and PCSL, the age of the serving personnel are high and then the training period is low. Here they get fewer train ability marks.

2. Socio Economic Status – This is where your PIQ comes in handy to the psychologist. He will go through your PIQ to get details such as your home town (whether it is rural / urban), your parents' education, their work (financial background), the school and colleges in which you have studied and the various opportunities you have got in your life, and how well you have made use of them to acquire your skills and shape your behavior.

3. OIR – This indicates how good you are with basic reasoning skills. It is believed that someone with a higher OIR can improve himself better than someone who has a lower grade. You need to perform well in the OIR test so that you will have an advantage over other candidates.

4. Insight – It is also important that an individual should know about his strengths and weaknesses, so that he is more amenable to accepting change. Your insight quotient is assessed in the SD. Better insight leads to better development.

5. Motivation – Another aspect that the SD focuses on is how much you are interested in improving yourself. Remember that learning is a lifelong process, and only those who have a thirst for knowledge can learn, and those who learn continuously can bring positive changes in themselves. Project the psychologist your real interest and motivation so that you can have edge over the others in the final assessment.

Please remember that this book provides just a summary of what is needed to pass your assessment with the best possible marks. There is much more that you will need to learn and prepare for, and this book gives an overview that you will need to supplement with other study materials. I would advise you to do your own research on the subject to add to your preparation so that you can get yourself fully up to speed for the testing process. Our aim is not to promise that you will know as much as an assessor, but to put you on the right track so that many of you will be ready and able to join the most prestigious service that is dedicated to the defense of our country.

I have heard that some people who do not pass blame the system, but that is not necessarily the case. You should bear in mind that the assessors are also human, and there may possibly be errors in the assessment from time to time. Blaming the system therefore is rather unproductive; instead, you should focus on preparing thoroughly so you can perform well in the SSB.

I hope the information provided in this guide is helpful. If you have any further queries, kindly call or write to us. We would be glad to provide you further assistance.

Jai Hind.
